UDIA Celebrates Development Excellence

The 2011 Urban Development Institute of Australia's (UDIA) National Awards for Excellence were announced last night at the Adelaide Convention Centre. The UDIA National Awards Gala Dinner is a night of celebration, recognising the highest quality developments from across the country. This year's nominees again delivered innovative and excellent projects which are of the highest standards in the industry.

"The 2011 UDIA National Awards for Excellence are a wonderful testament to the sheer quality of development in Australia. The nominees for this year's awards are all examples of well designed and economically successful urban development projects. The developments have also managed to address critical social and environmental issues such as sustainability and affordable housing, and I congratulate them for their outstanding work" said Peter Sherrie, UDIA National President.

The awards consisted of nine categories and the national awards Judges, Gary Rusling and Grant Dennis, were extremely impressed with all the nominated projects.

UDIA National congratulates the winners on their achievement and commitment to excellence, and thanks the award sponsors for their ongoing support.
