Luna Park Celebrates Development Excellence

The 2010 Urban Development Institute of Australia's (UDIA) National Awards for Excellence were announced last night at Luna Park, celebrating Australia's contemporary knowledge, skills and innovation in the urban development industry.

Despite the challenges impacting on the industry, the UDIA National Awards are a night for celebrations, recognising the highest quality developments from all over Australia. This year's nominees again delivered innovative and excellent projects that are of the highest standards in the industry.

"The 2010 UDIA National Awards for Excellence are a showcase for the very best of Australia's development projects. The nominees for tonight's awards have demonstrated the best in urban development whilst addressing critical social and environmental issues such as sustainability and affordable housing, and I congratulate them for their outstanding work." Peter Sherrie, UDIA National President

The 2010 UDIA National awards consisted of nine categories ranging from Masterplanned Development to Urban Renewal Projects.

The UDIA National Award for Excellence Judges, Gary Rusling and Grant Dennis, were extremely impressed with this year's nominated projects, which were of the highest standard.

UDIA National congratulates the winners on their achievement and commitment to excellence, and thanks the award sponsors for their on-going support of UDIA and the UDIA National Awards for Excellence.
